STRIKERS' BRICKS HALT CAR AT HASTINGS LINE

Bruised Crew Take Battered Vehicle Back to Yonkers

For two months, since the car men strike, the trolley rails have rusted in the street. After the management of the company had surveyed the wreckage which followed their attempt to resume service yesterday, it seemed probable that at least two months more would pass before another effort would be made to run the cars. Leslie Sutherland, general manager of the Yonkers Railroad Company, started a car from Yonkers, in the di-rection of Hastings, yesterday morn-ing. An hour later the battered vehi-cle was trundled back to the starting point. The woodwork was splintered, the glass shattered, the crew bruised, and the car had never got into Hast-
